LEWIS CALLS OFF SOFT COAL STRIKE

This Is My Story

MacArthur Leaves; Enemy Sends First Surrender Demand

In today's article General Wainwright deals with the reaction of men to the news that General Douglas MacArthur had departed for Australia, Wainwright's new duties as commander-in-chief of forces in the hopeless war for the Philippines, and the first enemy demand that he surrender.

INSTALLMENT NO. 11

AFTER saying goodbye to General MacArthur on March 10, 1942, the day he told me he was pulling out for Australia, I walked slowly back to the Malinta tunnel on Corregidor and picked up my aides, Col. Johnny Pugh and Major Tom Dooley. I would like to have told them the news, but I had been sworn to secrecy.

It was a quiet ride back to Bataan on the little boat, and my thoughts were filled with the events running from the time my wife and I arrived in the Philippines, 15 months before, to today's new assignment and hopeless situation.

Sgt. Carroll, my orderly, met us at Mariveles with the jeep. We climbed in silently and drove back to my trailer headquarters in the woods south of Bagac, while I speculated on the forces I would have under me, when I assumed command of all Luzon units on the morning of March 12.

70,000 Against Quarter of Million

I would have, in all, about 70,000 men, not nearly all of them combat troops. Gen. Homma's new landings in the Lingayen Gulf area had increased the Jap force to about a quarter of a million men. There was, of course, little comparison between our physical condition and arms, and theirs.

I would now command both the I and the II Corps. They made up about 60,000 of my men, with about 35,000 in Parker's II Corps and 25,000 in my old I Corps. Sprinkled among them were 10,000 service corpsmen, nine or two quartermaster groups and the medical units, which included about 100 American nurses.

Far to the north I had two small guerrilla bands, totaling 2,000 and still reachable by radio. On Corregidor and the three smaller forts in Manila Bay—Forts Drum, Frank and Hughes—were about 10,000 more men, including a regiment of Marines. Defenders of the fortified islands were under the overall command of Maj. Gen. George F. Moore.

Navy of Meager Size

My "Navy" by that time consisted of four motor torpedo boats, commanded by Lieut. John Bulkeley, two or three small minesweepers, and a few miscellaneous craft. The "air force" was down to one P-40, in bad condition and hidden at a field just east of Mariveles.

Not long before we had raised our air force to four P-40's, thanks to aid from the south. They continued to be used essentially for reconnaisance, but one night they more than reverted to type. Each was fitted with make-shift bomb-racks and took off with a total of 1,200 pounds of explosives—300 pounds to each plane—swept out low over Subic Bay and raised Hell with a concentration of Jap ships.

The Jap radio, with its customary flair for exaggeration, said that the ships were attacked by 27 B-17's and that 14 of the four-engined Flying Fortresses had been shot down by Jap gunners.

We got a laugh out of that, but the laugh froze when three of the four P-40's cracked up on the landing back at Mariveles. So now there was one.

Officers Get the News

On the morning of March 12, 1942, I lined up all general officers of the I Corps at my headquarters and told them the news of MacArthur's departure and of the new command setup.

I watched their faces as I spoke. They were all at first depressed by the news that our great commander had been forced, by order of President Roosevelt, the Commander in Chief, to leave us. But I soon saw that they understood, just as I understood. They realized as well as I what the score was.

I then gave command of my old I Corps to Brig. Gen. A. M. Jones, and hitched up my creaking trailer. I moved my headquarters 20 miles south to a clearing just east of Mariveles, where MacArthur had established what was called his Advanced Headquarters on Bataan.

It was not an ideal setup. My trailer, bad as it was, was the most durable structure in the clearing. The rest of my headquarters force camped on the ground.

WAR CHEST AT $48,900 ON SECOND REPORT

Workers Spurt for Goal as Total Falls Slightly Below Expectations.

War Chest Goal	$90,000.00
Reported last night	$32,942.97
Previously reported	$18,156.84
Total to date	$41,099.81
To be raised	$48,900.19

Marion County's United War Chest drive for $90,000 which got under way early last week failed to reach the hoped for $50,000 mark when reports were turned in at the second campaign workers meeting last night at the Masonic temple, but if the spirit of the men and women present was read aright, the numerals in no way reflected the enthusiasm and interest in the campaign. The workers, from the cochairmen down through the teams, are on the job, and last night's reports only whetted their spirits and served as a challenge to meet the $90,000 figure, the quota set to finance the county's share of the national war fund and carry on the work of the agencies in the Marion Community Foundation, Inc.

Going After Contributions

The contributions are to be had and we're going after them, seemed to be the attitude of every man and woman present, when E. L. Cleveland, presiding chairman, announced that the next report meeting will be held Thursday night, Oct. 25.

Individual gifts are not as large as in former years and the reports from the industrial divisions are far from complete, the reports showed. The latter is due, it was pointed out, to the fact that in some of the shops arrangements have been made for the men to work an extra day, the wages for the day to be turned over to the chest fund. In some instances the men have not put in this extra time, but will have done so by the Oct 25 meeting.

This year's budget, which is nearly $10,000 under that of last year, was carefully and thoroughly studied from every angle before the campaign was launched, Harold Grigsby, who with Robert White is serving as cochairman, said in discussing the drive today. The fact that the war is over, wartime factories have closed or are closing, local factories are in the process of reconversion to peacetime production and the readjustment of the employment situation were major items taken into consideration in paring the budget figures below that of pre-

Congress Drafts Huge Cut in Government's Spending

Committee Recommends 52-Billion Dollar Slash; Over-Optimism on Tax Reductions Is Hit.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—Cancellation of $52,453,535,278 in government spending authorized for the current fiscal year was recommended today by the house appropriations committee.

A direct result of the war's end, the legislation which the committee sent to the house for consideration tomorrow provides for

Cancellation of $46,264,441,439 in direct appropriations already made for the year ending next June 30

Wiping out the $4,187,903,339 in contractural authority for the same period. If used, this would have required additional appropriations of that amount

Recovery of $1,190,500 in funds of corporations created by the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs

While the committee made no reference in its written report to the possible effect that huge savings would have on taxes, Chairman Cannon (D-Mo) cautioned against any over-optimism on the part of taxpayers.

"This means that there will be just that much less deficit spending for the current year and the national debt increase will be slown down a little," Cannon said in an interview "I see no prospects for substantial tax reductions as a result of this legislation."

Say Economic Effect of Atom To Be Slow

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 — A leading scientist believes that when atomic energy eventually is harnessed its economic impact may be moderate at first

This opinion was expressed by Dr. Vannevar Bush, director of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, in testimony made public today by the house appropriations committee.

Bush also said he doubted whether a cure for cancer could be discovered quickly merely by providing huge sums for research.

"Faster Than Sound" Air Travel Is Seen

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—Congress heard today that aeronautical scientists believe airplanes will be built with speeds faster than sound—exceeding 750 miles an hour—and that there is no limit to their size

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics reported that revolutionary changes are in prospect both in the form of airplanes and the means of propulsion.

The statement was presented to the house appropriations committee in an appeal for continued allotments of money for research in aeronautics.

Hoover Predicts Crime Wave for U. S.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct 17—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover fears America may be in for a "rather serious crime wave"

But the house appropriations committee to which the G-man chief expressed his concern declined to rescind a contemplated slash of $2,480,000 in FBI funds for the current fiscal year.

Predicting an increase in kidnaping bank robbery and extortion, Hoover pleaded with the committee not to reduce the wartime strength of his agency too fast.

The budget bureau had recommended that FBI funds be cut from $35,829,000 to $33,349,000, thus reducing personnel from 10,872 to 9,000 Hoover asked to

TRUMAN PLANS DRAFT REPORT

Will Address Congress Tuesday in Plea for Peacetime Military Training.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—President Truman will appear before congress next Tuesday to deliver a message on peacetime universal training.

The President will address a joint session at 12:30 p. m. (EST), Speaker Rayburn told reporters after a White House conference on the administration's legislative program

Mr Truman has indicated his support for military training along the lines advocated by General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff.

Announcement of the President's plan came as Secretary of War Patterson advocated merger of the War and Navy departments as a step toward maintaining world peace.

Urging prompt action on the controversial plan, he told the senate military committee the subordinate branches should be ground, sea and air.

First Witness

The secretary of war was the first witness before the committee as it began hearings on various merger proposals.

Patterson said that the atomic bomb and other lessons from World War II all pointed in the direction of unified control of the nation's land, sea and air forces"

Such control was exercised, he said, through the wartime joint chief of staff after "we learned from the hard experience" of divided control

The formation of post-war military policy appeared to be shaping up as one of the biggest and toughest jobs confronting congress.

Most legislators were wagging their heads over the prospect that Mr Truman soon will toss into their troubled ranks the issue of drafting young men for military training when there isn't a war on

MINERS TOLD TO RETURN TO WORK MONDAY

UMW Says Action Taken in Public Interest; To Resume Dispute Later.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—John L. Lewis today called off the soft coal strikes effective Monday. A United Mine Workers spokesman said the action was taken "in the public interest."

Lewis, in a telegram to officers and members of all local unions said that future efforts to "abate this controversy" over recognition of his Foremen's Union "will be resumed at a later more appropriate date."

The United Mine Workers' chief said "all negotiations incident to the controversy affecting clerical, technical and supervisory employes of the industry have been discontinued."

There are approximately 22,000 to 30,000 such workers. Strikes over their recognition as a unit in Lewis' UMW began Sept. 21 and had spread to more than 1,000 mines up to today.

More than half of the 400,000 soft coal miners were idle when the strikes were called off.

K. C Adams, spokesman for the United Mine Workers, said "obviously the government has failed to settle the matter," and added that "obviously the action is taken in the public interest."

Government conciliation efforts under guidance of Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach collapsed Monday night after eight days of confident conferences aimed at settling the strikes.

No Signs Seen Of Early Finish To Waterfront Strike

The nation's strike picture, brightened today by the promised end of the soft coal work stoppage, was still one of uneasiness.

Other front-ranking labor controversies of the more than 130 separate disputes across the country were the longshoremen's strike at New York's harbor; the prolonged controversy in Hollywood movie studios, and the walkout of some 81,000 AFL lumber workers in the Pacific northwest.

In the Pittsburgh and Chicago steel mill centers, operations were the lowest in several years. Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. has furloughed thousands of workers and a spokesman said that unless the coal supply is increased soon at least 25,000 of the company's 36,000 employes in the Chicago and Gary, Ind., districts will be laid off. Most steel mills reported similar conditions.

The magazine Iron Age estimated the steel industry would lose more than 300,000 tons of steel ingots this week because of the enforced shutdowns.

No Let-up Seen

There appeared no indications of an immediate ending of the 17-day old strike of AFL longshoremen at New York harbor as strife within the union flared, with CIO unionists involved.

Police estimated that 5,000 to 7,000 of more than 35,000 striking longshoremen came back to work yesterday, at the behest of AFL Longshoremen President Joseph P. Ryan.

Insurgent stevedores demanded the ousting of Ryan while representatives of the Ryan faction blamed the union split on Harry Bridges, west coast CIO longshoremen's labor leader, and on the CIO National Maritime union which is supporting the insurgents. The dispute stemmed over extension of a provision covering dues of Congress and broke upon a proposed 25¢ assessment.

Sentiment favoring that added to the prospects of quick action by the insurgent stevedores in calling out their men on strike. Their demands include the ousting of Ryan, abolition of the dues assessment, and other changes in the setup of the [illegible]

Four Super Highways To Cross Ohio in Nationwide Network

Tentative Plan Apparently Misses Marion; Will Link Large Cities Throughout U. S.

By The Associated Press

Ohio's dream of super-motor highways, part of a nationwide network, drew a step nearer reality today.

Four trunk lines across Ohio, most of them from four and six-lanes wide, have been charted tentatively as part of a nearly 40,000-mile system designed to lace together all but two of the nation's cities of more than 100,000 population.

Ohio's proposed section of the express highway system has been under consideration for several months by the public roads administration in Washington. Lack of agreement between Ohio and Pennsylvania on the place where the Pittsburgh-Cleveland route will cross the state line was reported holding up a decision.

State Highway Director Perry T. Ford disclosed agreement now has been reached but declined to reveal the place selected pending anticipated administration approval of Ohio's tentative plans

The Ohio segment of the system will aggregate 1,158 miles, with two east-west and two north-south routes crossing the state The routes will pass through or skirt all major cities except Akron and Youngstown.

The east-west route from Pittsburgh will pass between Akron and Youngstown to reach Cleveland, swing south of Elyria but hit Fremont and Toledo and extend west.

The other, also from Pittsburgh, will enter Ohio near St. Clairsville and pass through Zanesville, Columbus and Springfield enroute to Indianapolis.

One north-south route will enter the state from Erie, Pa., and pass through Cleveland, Mansfield, Columbus, Washington C. H., Wilmington and Cincinnati.

Pass Near Findlay

The other from Detroit will hit Toledo, Lima, Dayton and Cincinnati. It will pass near Findlay.

The routes through Cincinnati run to Louisville and Knoxville

An Indianapolis-Cincinnati route also is proposed.

Outer belts will be constructed at Cleveland and Cincinnati for easy movement of traffic around those cities. Columbus and Toledo will have inner belts circling their business districts.

Ohio has recommended special construction to make the limited-access highways easily available to Akron, Youngstown, Massillon and Canton.

The proposal would link Akron and Youngstown with a direct road crossing the Pittsburgh-Cleveland route. Another road would lead south from Youngstown to the express highway, thus forming a triangle with Youngstown at the junctions of the two sides and the express highway forming the hypotenuse.

A similar triangle would be formed with Akron at the junctions of the road to Youngstown with the express highway and Interstate Akron-Cleveland. The Youngstown-Akron road [illegible]

STATE LIFTS FREEZE ON BEER AND WINE

Permits To Be Issued Again, But Not on Liquor.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17—The state liquor board today lifted all restrictions on the allowable number of permits to sell beer, wines, and to operate private clubs, but kept the "freeze" on hard liquor by the glass and night clubs

The action, long delayed by illness of former board chairman Lowell Bodey of Urbana, came on a two-to-one vote, with the new chairman, Mrs Maude McQuate, Cleveland Republican, in the minority.

It meets demands of some veterans' organizations who contended that many returning service men wanted to open beer parlors and restaurants but could not do so under the war-time "freeze" on the number of permits allowed in the state

Mrs McQuate issued a statement dissenting from the majority view of members Charles P Sweeney and Harry Mettler and asserting that the liquor department had only 130 enforcement officers to police the present permit holders but needed 250

"I am not opposed to 'unfreezing' the permits because of the governor's wish, as has been printed," she said, "but because of my own observation in the board hearing room and outside. We have 130 enforcement officers when we should have 380. We cannot have proper supervision. "I prefer to continue as is until more enforcement officers can be added. FIRE HITS GARAGE ON N. MAIN STREET

Two Cars, Building Damaged at Ardrey Motor Sales.

A fire at the Ardrey Motor Sales on North Main street broke out shortly after 11 a m today causing damage which is expected to run into several thousand dollars Chief Owen Sifritt said today. The exact amount has not been determined.

The blaze which raged for an hour is believed to have started from a short circuit in the battery charging equipment. Two cars, in the garage for repairs, were damaged considerably. Damages will include ruined electrical equipment as well as damage to the frame structure.

Firemen from the East Mark street station and Engines No. 1 and 4 from Central station responded to the alarm, working for more than an hour before the flames were brought under control The Marion Supply Co., housed in the same building, will have mostly smoke and water damage, Chief Sifritt reported.

For most enlisted men the point total was cut from 44 to 41. Further reductions to 39 on December 1 and to 38 on January 1 were promised.

Million Unemployed Seen for This Region

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Oct. 17—J. Kimball Johnson, director of the United States Employment Service for Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, today predicted 1,000,000 persons in the tri-state region would be seeking jobs by Jan. 1.

Johnson announced USES officers in 16 of the region's major industrial areas have been ordered to survey job opportunities and labor supplies "to bring out the facts underlying the so-called anomaly of 86,000 jobs open in those areas while 294,000 men and women are claiming unemployment compensation."

Marshall Declares Atom Bomb Increases Need for Soldiers

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—Development of the atom bomb has increased, rather than decreased, the importance of the soldier who fights on the ground, in the opinion of Gen George C. Marshall.

The Army chief of staff told the house appropriations committee that if some future war finds enemy nations hauling atom bombs at each other, somebody is going to have to move in and stop the enemy firing.

Testifying on an appropriations [illegible] bill, Marshall told [illegible] today, Marshall had this to say about the "effect of the atomic bomb on the plan of the military establishment."

"I would say that it has increased the necessity for the [illegible] of troops to be used at the outset of any campaign for the reason that only troops can act quickly in the [illegible] of ground [illegible]

HIROHITO ACTS TO UNITE JAPS

Emperor Grants Amnesty to Million Prisoners in Political Move.

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Oct. 17—Emperor Hirihito, whose future has been a burning topic of speculation ever since the American occupation, granted amnesty today to nearly 1,000,000 Japanese as an openly avowed move to unite Nippon "in meeting a great change in history."

Domei agency noted one effect of the rescript, honoring the day when the first rice crop is offered to the gods, would be to enable as many people as possible to take part in the coming elections.

"We, in meeting a great change in history, are indeed concerned to conquer the difficulties of the times with the country united as one and will trust in the cooperation and assistance of all the people," said the rescript. "Therefore, we have ordered our officials to carry out an amnesty. All our officials and people embody our will."

The rescript, pardoned 320,000 Japanese, reduced the sentence of 37,000 and ordered restoration of civil rights to 600,000.

The emperor's appeal for unity was made at a time when Japanese Communists, celebrating the release of some of their leaders from prison on orders of General MacArthur, were working openly for an end to imperialism.

MacArthur's headquarters announced today that investigating parties of Americans have found fortunes in diamonds, platinum, gold and silver cached by Japanese admirals and generals in secluded areas.

In another announcement, headquarters reversed a previous decision which would have established quotas of news correspondents in Japan, the Philippines and Korea. The lifting of the quotas, which had been announced last Friday, followed protests by the press in the United States and by the Correspondents Club in Tokyo.

An American finance officer said Japanese army and navy officers had cached the precious metals for use if disaster came—but the war ended before they could get them out of the country.

Eighth Army headquarters reported the arrest and imprisonment of Lt. Gen. Shigeru Sawada, accused of complicity in the executions of some of Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle's fliers who raided Japan April 18, 1942.

New Strike Looms

A general strike of 18,000 CIO members in New Castle county, Del., was threatened by union officials unless a five week strike at the National Vulcanizing Fibre Co. is peacefully settled.

The five week strike at National Fibre by 700 CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers started, union leaders said, after the company failed to negotiate a new contract. The company said action would be taken when the workers came back to work.

There was no sign of settlement in the Pacific northwest lumber strike by some 61,000 AFL workers while CIO international workers resumed a conference with operators to discuss their demands for a 25-cent hourly wage increase for 40,000 CIO members. The AFL group is seeking a $1.10 hourly minimum for the industry and more than 300 plants in five states have closed since the strike started Sept. 24.

Germans Helped Pay for Own Downfall

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—Germany helped unwittingly to pay a tiny share of this country's cost of whipping her.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover told the story to the house appropriations committee, which made it public today.

Reiterating that foreign agents failed to commit a single act of sabotage in this country during the war, Hoover asserted:

"Through our foreign intelligence operations we knew the enemies' plans to send agents to this country. When they landed, we were able to take them into custody at the time of their arrival.

"When Himmler sent one agent here to build a radio for contact with Hamburg, we did not take him into immediate custody. As a matter of fact, we secured his help and, as a result, we convicted a ring of 33 German agents.

"The German government sent $21,000 for the construction of a secret radio station. We expended less than $5,000 and returned the balance of over $16,000 to the treasury department."

ROTARY CLUB HEARS DISTRICT GOVERNOR

Organization Aims Discussed by Dr. W. A. Zaugg.

Dr. Walter A. Zaugg of Bowling Green, governor of the 157th district of Rotary International, spoke to the Marion Rotary club and guests at the club's weekly luncheon meeting Tuesday in Hotel Harding.

This was Dr. Zaugg's official visit to the Marion club in connection with his year's administration as district governor. Preceding the club luncheon session he held a meeting with the board of directors and committee chairmen.

Dr. Zaugg, who is professor of education at Bowling Green State university, began his address by relating that a mathematics teacher once told him that three points determine a plane. He stated that the plane upon which a Rotarian lives must be determined by four points, and that of these the point of fellowship is the most important. He said Rotary was founded by two men who were in want of companionship, and it now has a membership of 350,000.

The second point Dr. Zaugg designated as that of making a living. Qualification for membership in Rotary, he said, is dependent on a person's occupation, and no occupation has innate dignity—it must be given dignity by the individual, who must place social service higher than personal wants.

A citizen's debt to the community was Dr. Zaugg's third point. He declared experience has shown that Rotary accomplishes much in fulfilling that debt because of the spirit of fellowship among the members.

Dr. Zaugg said the fourth point, world neighborliness, depends upon Rotary and other groups reminding the future generations of the horrors of war and insuring that democracy and tolerance are practiced in this country.

Introducing the speaker, Alfred Donithen, Rotary program chairman, said Dr. Zaugg in addition to being a member of the faculty at Bowling Green university, is a civic leader and an author.

Ralph T. Lewis, chairman of the Rotary club's birthday committee, gave brief sketches of members of the club whose birthdays are in October.

Guests of the club were L. F. Alber of Cincinnati, Dr. S. M. Ingmire, pastor of Epworth church and Dick Foster, representing the journalism classes at Harding High school, who was this week's student reporter assigned to attend the Rotary meeting.

WITNESS CONFESSES COLUMBUS KILLING

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17 — A witness who telephoned police to report the fatal shooting of a filling station attendant in an attempted holdup today told them he did the killing.

Police Capt. Glenn Hoffman and Detective William Donner announced that a fugitive from the Mansfield reformatory signed a confession after 11 hours of questioning and a lie detector test.

Filing of charges was held in abeyance until police could find the pistol with which George Boyer, 51, was slain Sunday night. Boyer himself apparently fired five shots at the robber.

The 24-year-old man being held told police earlier that Boyer was shot to death while resisting a robber who fled in an automobile. The man said he had stopped at the filling station, accompanied by a 19-year-old girl companion and her seven-month-old baby, to await a friend.

In his confession he related he opened his coat, displayed a pistol and told Boyer, "Come on 'Pops,' you know what I want."

He opened fire, he added, when Boyer ducked through a side door into a grease rack room, then he followed Boyer outside the station and continued shooting at him.

D-3, permitting sale of hard liquor by the glass, and D-5 permitting night club operations, continue at present numbers.

Neither Mettler nor Sweeney made any statement, but Sweeney was known to have favored lifting the restrictions since the question first came up months ago.

Mettler studied overnight the transcripts of hearings the board has held on the issue, then gave his decision at a brief board meeting this morning. He was appointed to the board only last week following the resignation of Judge Bodey because of his illness and an accident in which the fourth member, William Hess of Cincinnati, suffered a fractured skull.

Java Revolt Seen As Part of Asia's Fight To Be Free

By J. M. ROBERTS JR.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Indonesian references to "nonviolence," similar to those which have accompanied India's sporadic outbursts in her long search for liberation from western domination, serve to remind that the present situation in Java is not some new post-war manifestation, rather a continuation of a movement which has become indigenous to southeast Asia.

Throughout Burma, Malaya and the Indies, long before the war, there was a growing restlessness and sometimes openly hostile attitude toward the British, French and Dutch administrators of a rich western Pacific area where men produced, for a few cents a day, tremendous wealth which went to swell western standards of living.

Instead of establishing educational and health centers by means of which native populations might prepare themselves for self-government, the ruling powers permitted continuation right up to World War II of a system reminiscent of the earliest days of imperial expansion. Even with the growth of some feeling of moral responsibility after World War I, little had been done to raise the position of the various Malayan peoples.

Welcomed War

When the new war broke, the British and French found the situation disastrous. While we had little evidence one way or another from Java at the time, it is reasonable to assume that Indonesia leaders there, having formed a considerable underground liberation movement long before the war, were not too sorry, in the beginning, to see the Japanese oust their Dutch masters.

It is easily believable that the Japanese, except for the ineptness which characterized their entire war effort, might have mobilized all southeast Asia and at least parts of China and India on their side. Instead they substituted open and forceful theft for suave cultivation, and their chance was gone.

But the fact that the Japanese missed the boat does not mean that the situation is any different. There are from 150 to 200 million people of Malayan extraction in the area. They have become an active part of a tremendous movement, stretching from Lybia to the southwest Pacific, by which Moslem, Hindu and Pacific peoples alike are determined to shake off western domination.

Look to Philippines

In dealing with the European countries the Malayans, including the Indonesians, have before them the examples of the Philippines, where in 50 years their relatives have progressed from island primitiveness to self government. The 150 million are not likely to be satisfied with anything less. Even persuading them to accept the enlightened tutelage necessary before independence may prove extremely difficult in their present state of mind.

All of which is a long way of saying that the stories coming out of Java today cannot be read as applying to an isolated situation. We have the word of Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, resident commissioner of the Philippines to the United States, writing in Collier's, that:

"Essentially the problem of the Pacific represents the race problem of the world. Ignore it, sidestep it, neglect it, and the next war will be a race war."

on hand. The two big bomb plants here reported producing "right now" and "building up a reserve."

The general told the committee he believes in maintaining a military position strong enough to impress foreign nations "with the readily available military power of America."

"If they know that we are strong, then they will not dare to take liberties," he said. "On the contrary, if they know that we cannot develop our great potential for months, then terrible things may happen."

Scrapping Costly

Gen. H. H. Arnold, head of the Army Air Forces, told the committee of the high cost of scrapping surplus B-17 (Flying Fortress) and B-24 (Liberator) planes. Arnold said he believes it would "be economy in the long run" to take them "out to some place such as one of our stations in the west and then have a big press roll them into compressed piece of metal, throw that into the furnace, pour it out in pigs and stack the pigs up. Then you have something that is an asset instead of a liability."

Committee members said it cost $3,600 to tear down a Liberator for salvage, but the highest bids received for the different parts were $2,100.

C. OF C. URGES FLAT TAX CUT

Asks 20 to 25 Per Cent Slash; Outlines Seven Point Plan for Relief.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—The United States Chamber of Commerce urged congress today to give individual income tax payers a flat reduction of 20 to 25 per cent in the new tax bill.

Ellsworth C. Alvord, chairman of the chamber's committee on federal finance, also asked the senate finance committee for repeal of the corporate excess profits tax and reduction of the corporate surtax.

His prepared testimony came after Chairman George (D-Ga) told reporters he believes tax relief under the bill should be limited to $5,000,000,000, as recommended by Secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson.

The house ways and means committee has estimated its version of the legislation, as passed by the house, would reduce federal revenues $5,350,000,000.

Alvord made seven recommendations:

1. Repeal of the excess profits tax as of Dec. 31, with retention for two years of the "carryback" provision for unused excess profits tax credit. This, he said, would permit "averaging" of profits over a period of years.

2. As much reduction in the corporate normal and surtax rate as revenue requirements will permit.

3. Repeal of the capital stock tax effective last June 30 and of the declared-value excess profits tax effective next June 30, as approved by the house.

4. Reduction effective next July of war excise rates to 1942 levels and other excise adjustments.

5. Continuation of the social security tax at one per cent, as approved by the house.

6. Flat percentage reduction of individual taxes. Alvord estimated a reduction of "20 to 25 per cent is needed as relief from present onerous rates and applicable to earned income, to investment income and capital gains."

As passed by the house, the bill would wipe out 1946 tax bills for some 12,000,000 low income persons, grant varying reductions to others and guarantee every taxpayer a cut of at least 10 per cent.

7. Repeal of the renegotiation act as of last December, or provision to allow against renegotiable profits the expenses allowable for income tax purposes up to next Dec. 31.

vious years, he stated. The closing of the Goodrich Co., Ferro Enamel, H. & K., B. & B. and other wartime industries employing many workers who contributed to the chest, is curtailing subscriptions received in campaigns of former years, he pointed out. The budget was reduced in order to not overburden any particular individual or group and for that reason everyone must give as much or a little bit more than last year in order to meet the quota, he believes.

Cleveland Speaks

Mr. Cleveland defined the campaign as "serious business" and expressed whole hearted confidence in the workers and the success of the drive. The community, he said, can not be built and built right, if we do not help those who need help. The following are the reports as of last night:

Large industries, turned in $8,939.84, total $18,033.18; small industries, $1,344, total $1,991.50; utilities and transportation, $3,519.13, total $4,519.13; national stores, $1,396, total $1,396, (no previous report); commercial, $1,553, total $6,267.50; government and public employes, $537.50, total $1,204; general, $4,994, total $6,756; county, $619.50, total $934.50. Total to date $41,099.81.

The invocation was spoken by Rev. M. E. Hollensen, pastor of Emanuel Lutheran church. Dinner music was furnished by Mrs. Goldie Swope, accordionist, and Miss Virginia Grover, pianist and violinist. J. G. Lytle led group singing.

held since early in the war seemed likely to come out at a senate military committee hearing on proposals to join all the armed forces under a single cabinet member.

Secretary of War Patterson was called for testimony on a bill offered by Senator Hill of Alabama, the Democratic whip. Patterson will be followed tomorrow by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and by Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Air Forces chief, Friday.

Patterson and the generals favor the merger. But the Navy is expected to dissent next week.

Marshall voiced a new plea for universal training last night, terming it vital to world security plans. Speaking at a dinner of the Reserve Officers association, the general asserted:

"The ability to enforce what we feel is the right thing, the decent thing in the world will depend on a citizen army."

Mr. Truman who attended the dinner declared the chief of staff had carried out the "greatest military task in history."

WE WANT OUR CUSTOMERS AND THE PUBLIC TO KNOW WHAT THE COAL STRIKE IS ABOUT

This is an illegal strike, in direct violation of a written contract made only six months ago, which still has at least six months to run before it can be reopened by either party.

It provides:

> "The mine workers intend no intrusion upon the rights of management as heretofore practised and understood . . . The term 'mine worker' as used in this agreement SHALL NOT INCLUDE mine foremen, assistant mine foremen, fire bosses or bosses in charge of any class of labor inside or outside the mine, or coal inspectors, weigh bosses, watchmen, clerks or members of the executive supervisory sales and technical forces of the operators."

The one and only demand made by John L. Lewis now is for the immediate unionization of our supervisory and management employees under the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers of America, District 50.

THIS IS IN DIRECT VIOLATION OF HIS UNEXPIRED CONTRACT

Supervisory employees have definite responsibilities not only for the safety of other employees, but for the fixing of contract rates of pay for particular jobs and for the efficient operation of the mine. Representatives of management can not follow both management and union leaderships at the same time. The American Method of management requires that the responsibilities of management be spread among its supervisory representatives and that they be responsible only to management.

OUR SUPERVISORY EMPLOYEES KNOW THIS AND DO NOT WANT TO BE UNIONIZED

This issue has been properly presented to and is now pending before the National Labor Relations Board for decision.

John L. Lewis is seeking to avoid a legal and orderly final adjudication of the case and by the coercion and intimidation of this strike enforce an immediate acceptance of his demands in direct violation of the terms of his contract.

THAT IS THE REASON FOR THIS STRIKE

We are ready to operate our mines and supply you with coal just as soon are we are permitted to work, and will then meet with Mr. Lewis to discuss the application or interpretation of any of the terms of our existing contract.

olated Jap Soldiers Leading Life of Riley on Isle of Bali

By HAL BOYLE

AN PASAR, BALI—"The Last ...se," as the tourist folders ... to describe Bali, is an earth- ...ion for Japanese troops hav- ...en last gambol in this iso- ... East Indian sanctuary.

The ...ess than 3,000 Japanese ... have lived the proverbial ... Riley for many months ... corner of the Netherlands ... Indies where no serious na- ...rvest has arisen.

... all external evidence, Bali ...rently accepted the Japanese ... as lackadaisically as it did ... European.

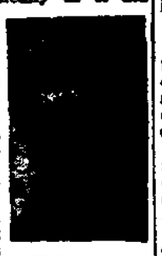
There is an almost ir- ...sistible impulse to drop the ...ite man's burden, don a loin cloth and join the little brown people in the sun.



Hal Boyle

It is a beautiful place in which to say to hell with it all—with the alarm clocks, telephones, taxes, jury duties and all the other necessities and niceties which bem in the western world.

The only thing that kept me from joining was the knowledge that my figure was a bit too plump for public display and that I sunburn easily; but for anyone who would like to end his days whittling monkey figures out of lemon wood, or perhaps betting on a few cockfights, this is the best address.

Airplanes Scarce

There is only one airport on the island, and except for a couple of bombing raids against Japanese planes based there, no echo of the war ever penetrated Bali's calm.

"Most of the bombs fell into the sea," said the Japanese army commander, who is retaining his sinecure until Allied troops move in.

Bali supplied some 15,000 tons of rice for Japan, but for months no vessel was able to sail because of the tight American sea blockade.

Hopelessly stranded and with nothing to do but wait for the finish, the Japanese here relaxed in comfortable billets and ate a rich diet of meats, fruits and vegetables which they will recall longingly in future years when they are back in their bleak homeland.

Japanese officers were quartered in luxurious tourist hotels with native servants to do everything from adjusting their mosquito nets to peeling their breakfast bananas. About the only excitement in their lives was to motor through the countryside, but after taking such a trip with a Japanese chauffeur, I am convinced they should be banned under the island game laws.

Make Own Rules

The Japanese drive solely with the throttle and the horn, scattering oxcarts and children like bowling pins and never slackening speed.

One Japanese driver in a single afternoon ran over one dog, two pigs and three chickens and scored a "probable" on a duck.

The several Japanese attempts to recruit Balinese for the army resulted in a force of about 1,000 men, who were drilled regularly but never saw any action.

Despite the lazy way of life, the Japanese commander stoutly insisted that the Balinese would make good soldiers, saying, "Their discipline was as good as that of Japanese troops and I believe they'd fight as well."

The few Europeans on Bali doubt this very much, one of them remarking, "the only thing these people ever fight over is a love affair, and usually the weather is too hot even for that.

"They aren't political-minded and the outside world does not touch their lives. Most of them wouldn't have fought for Japan's co-prosperity sphere any more than for the Monroe Doctrine, which they have never heard of."

Smoke Banished by New Device in Test at Columbus Station

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct .17—Smoke can be controlled by a twist of the wrist device, says E. R. Kaiser, assistant director of Bituminous Coal Research of Pittsburgh.

He proved the theory in a demonstration at Union Station here yesterday before the Smoke Prevention Association of America. One minute, clouds of dirty, black smoke poured from five steam locomotives. Then, with a twist of the control device, the smoke disappeared. In its place was a light tan haze hovering over the engines.

Kaiser explained the control device, which was operated by a key, as an over-fire steam jet developed by Richard B. Engdahl, research engineer at Battelle Memorial institute here.

The jet, he related, was a cylinder lined with insulation and having a steam nozzle in the center. The device, when connected to the boiler above the firebed level, permits steam to be shot over the coal and propels air into the fire, which supercharges smoke combustion and gives off only carbon dioxide gas and water vapor.

Kaiser reported 680 locomotives in the nation already were equipped with the over-fire steam jet in various modifications.

Municipal smoke control officials and combustion engineers of coal companies were among the more than 200 persons attending the meeting.

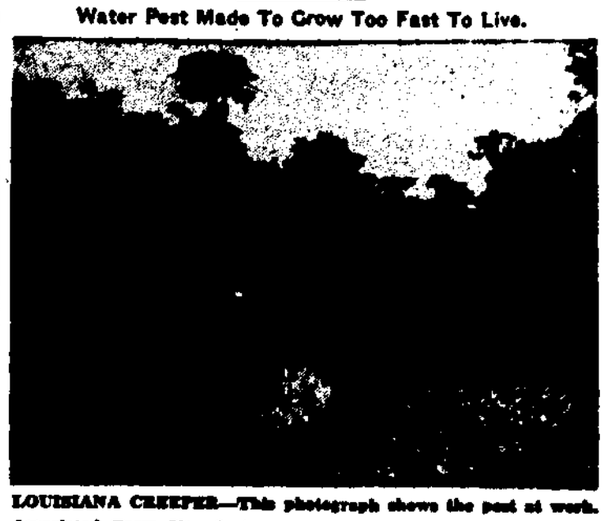
Louisiana Wars on Hyacinths

Water Pest Made To Grow Too Fast To Live.



LOUISIANA CREEPER—This photograph shows the pest at work.

Associated Press Newsfeatures

LAFAYETTE, La.—Scientists at Southwestern Louisiana Institute believe they have developed a way to rid the state of a "beautiful nuisance," water hyacinths, by making them grow too fast to live.

The plants, reportedly first brought to Louisiana by Japanese visitors to the New Orleans Cotton Exposition in the 1880's, are truly beautiful—lovely lavender blossoms atop green leaves and a bulbous, floating stem.

Certainly they are a nuisance, and an expensive one, clogging the state's thousands of canals, lakes, bayous and ponds with a growth thick enough to destroy fish and impede navigation.

The new treatment, spraying with a hormone-like compound that stimulates each plant cells to an almost unbelievable rate of growth, is the latest of a dozen methods tried in the last few years on the plant throughout each and every waterway.

It seems harmless to fish, and, of equal importance, that treatment may cost as little as 30 cents an acre.

Heating with Rays of Sun Put Into Use in Colorado

By International News Service

BOULDER, Colo. — Harnessing the sun to heat a home—a project long experimented with by scientists—has become a reality at the University of Colorado Engineering Experiment Station at Boulder.

Utilizing the so-called "greenhouse" principle scientists under the direction of Dr. George Lof installed a solar heating unit on the roof of Dr. Lof's home.

In a preliminary trial in the late spring, results were said to be a comfortable home temperature and a gas fuel saving of about one-third.

The C. U. Engineering Experiment Station expects to undertake research in an attempt to perfect a device to store solar heat. If the experiments prove successful, it may be possible to dispense with ordinary fuel in temperate zones and use only sun energy to heat a home, with storage facilities available for cloudy days.

Dr. Lof's solar unit is a box-like structure with three layers of ordinary glass. It is 40 feet long and 12 feet wide. The unit rises six inches above the shingle level.

Heat supplied by the solar unit on sunny days was "more than adequate" to maintain a comfortable home, Dr. Lof reported.

Automatic controls were installed so that when clouds obscured the sun and the temperature dropped perceptibly, a thermostat turned on the gas in the furnace. When the sun shone, the solar unit supplied the heat.

A fan drew air into the solar unit on the roof. After being heated in the unit, the air was drawn into the furnace through a rectangular sheet-iron pipe. Then the furnace fan blew the heated air out through the hot air vents in the house.

Part of the glass in the unit is covered with a black coating, under the "green-house" principle, absorbs short-wave radiations from the sun and then emits long-wave radiations. The glass is opaque to long-wave lengths, thereby preventing the escape of heat. Thus the unit is in effect a heat trap.

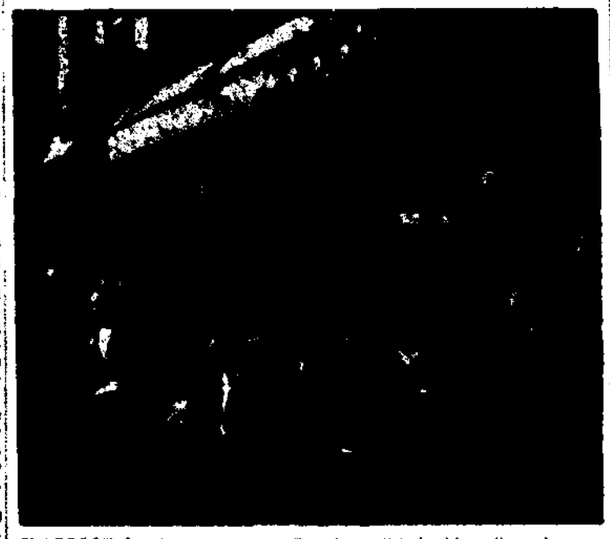
In Paris Champagne Flows and Dinner Is Only $50



INTERLUDE. Gay, leisurely Parisians filled sidewalk cafes on Easter Sunday in 1940, three months before the collapse.

By LARRY ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — If you are thinking about visiting Paris this year bring plenty of money and food.

A $1.75 dinner in New York costs $30 to $50 in Paris, and then it isn't half as good. But good champagne does flow freely at 900 francs ($18) a bottle.

One American correspondent tried living for a month at a Paris hotel, without the benefit of U. S. Army food, and in spite of himself he wound up with a bill of $800.

You still meet people you know at the crossroads of the world—the Cafe De La Paix in Rue Des Capucines—but they're all in uniform. Back in 1939 the cafe was usually jammed with free-spending tourists, now harder to find than a needle in a haystack.

But here there is seldom a shortage of French women, who make the most of cosmetics of all types, with weird results. They make the most, too, of what clothes they have. A simple little hat costs 2,000 francs ($40), and an imitation rayon summer street dress costs 3,000 francs ($100).

It's tough-sledding for French men too.

A new shirt of cheap material that vanishes after a few washings costs 600 francs ($12) or more.

Cleaning and pressing seem quite a problem, for most men wear suits that apparently haven't felt the force of an iron in many a day.

Transportation is a constant headache.

Taxicabs are creeping back to the streets and boulevards, but most of them have limited supplies of American gasoline and can't take you very far.

The Paris Metro (subway) bears most of the transportation burden, but it doesn't always go where you want to go and usually leaves you with a long walk.

Ohio State's Hopes Jolted As Two Stars Go On Injured List

Sarringhaus and Fisher Hurt in Practice, May Not Make Purdue Game.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17—Ohio State university's two offensive powerhouses—Paul Sarringhaus and Dick Fisher—missed practice today because of injuries and it was problematical whether they would be ready to go against Purdue Saturday.

Left halfback Sarringhaus' shoulder was jolted yesterday as he blocked a teammate. A muscle in Fisher's leg just above the knee suddenly pulled while he was running a play in scrimmage.

Trainer George Busenburg said it would take several days for recovery. He added that the hurts are of such a nature that full recovery might be delayed.

This bad news was partially offset by the return to top condition of regular tackles Russ Thomas and Thornton Dixon.

Coach Carroll Widdoes had Alex Verdova working out at right half and Hal Daugherty and Jerry Krall at the other backfield post. All are freshmen but have shown up well in their game appearances to date.

Henry D. Taylor, director of ticket sales, reported that only 6,000 general admission tickets remained unsold. All reserved seats are gone. He estimated a crowd of 74,000, which may prove to be the fifth largest stadium crowd in history.

With three major networks broadcasting, the game will be carried by approximately 300 radio stations.

NEIMI RETURNS TO PREXY GRID STAFF

Discharged from Navy, Resumes Old Coaching Job.

George Neimi returned to his old familiar position as assistant football coach at Harding High school Tuesday.

The last time he coached here was the fall of 1942 when Bill Williams held the head coaching reins of the Presidents.

Neimi received his honorable discharge from the Navy about two weeks ago.

Aside from his athletic duties, Neimi will be assigned to a teaching position in the public school system in the near future.

For the remainder of the football season he will aid Joe Petrich in an attempt to snap the losing streak which the Prexies have currently been undergoing.

He previously served as line coach under Williams.

At present Mr. Neimi is being confronted with the housing problem and is trying to locate a home.

AMLING OF BUCKEYES RATED OUTSTANDING LINEMAN FOR WEEK

Powerful Guard Recognized for Brilliant Play Against Wisconsin Saturday.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 — Warren Amling, a hard working member of Ohio State's crack forward wall, has won recognition as the outstanding lineman of the week.

The 21-year-old, 198-pound guard from Pana, Ill., drew the plaudits of newspapermen, players and coaches for his superior play in Ohio State's 12-0 conquest of Wisconsin Saturday.

A junior with two years of varsity experience, Amling played 59 minutes of the rugged Wisconsin tussle and his side of the line was "absolutely impregnable," Paul Horning of the Columbus Dispatch said.

Praised by Badgers

Wisconsin Coach Harry Stuhldreher remarked Amling "was a great player," while Amling's own mentor, Carroll Widdoes, said "he is the finest lineman I've seen all season."

Perhaps the greatest tribute the guard received came from Bill Hackett, the Buckeyes' All-America tackle who is through for the season because of injuries. Hackett said "Amling is greater now than I ever hoped to be."

Leon Bramlett, Navy end, came in for a lot of attention for his Saturday's effort, but Middie Boss Comdr. Oscar Hagberg declared that Guard Jim Carrington "was our outstanding lineman against Penn State. He turned in a whale of a game and his offensive and defensive blocking was superb."

Two other guards attracted the notice of spotters. John Cloiteaux, playing his first varsity game for Baylor, got more chances with the ball against Arkansas than a guard usually gets in a year. He intercepted three passes that helped Baylor upset the Razorbacks 23-13. Ernest "Bear" Knotts of Duke spent most of his time in Wake Forest's backfield.

Other linemen who starred included:

Ends — Paul Walker, Yale; Bob Spanaugle, Penn; Don Sailors, Nebraska; M. T. Burress, Mississippi State; Gene Wilson, Southern Methodist; Hubert Bechtol, Texas; Jim Callanan, Southern California, and Aubrey McCall, Oklahoma.

Tackles — George Sevitsky, Penn; Tom Hughes, Purdue, and Jack Dieringer, Nevada.

Guards—Ed Virshup, Temple; Grant Darnell, Texas A. & M., and Marion Ilerson, UCLA.

Centers — Neil Zundel, Princeton; Dick Scott, Navy; Frank Sniadak, Columbia, and Harold Watts, Michigan.

New Pro Grid Loop "Robbing" Old Teams

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 17—The All-America conference, embryonic professional football league that expects to begin operation in 1946, is going into the rosters of the long-standing National Football league for players, and apparently there's nothing the established league can do about it.

Two franchise holders of the new league, at Chicago and San Francisco, yesterday announced signing of three players each. All six are servicemen, among them three who had competed in the national grid circuit.

County Basketball Loop Maps Season Plans

Six Marion county basketball teams were represented at a meeting of managers last night in the Y.M.C.A. They were. McMillen Feed, Universal Cooler, Isaly Dairy, Martel, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Cochran family. Plans were discussed regarding the formation of more than one league. Prospective teams were reminded that Nov. 5 is the deadline for teams to be entered in the county league. Monday nights were set for the official night for games but another night will be added to that schedule if more than one league is formed. William Dutton, named chairman of referees, will announce members of his committee later. Managers will meet again Nov. 8 to discuss further plans for the fall and winter schedule.

Games Plentiful This Week-End

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 17—Almost befogged by the fanfare given such games as Minnesota-Northwestern and Ohio State-Purdue this week, there'll be one Western Conference football encounter that will get a lot more than just passing attention from midwest grid fans.

It won't involve any championship, but the meeting between Wisconsin and Illinois will carry with it all the rivalry the game has engendered since the first meeting 50 years ago.

Both teams, it appeared today, will go into the fray with many first-line players sidelined with injuries.

Elsewhere around the midwest grids:

At Iowa City, the Hawkeyes continued to work on their running attack as Coach Clem Crowe stressed blocking and execution details. . . . At Northwestern, Coach Lynn Waldorf sought backfield replacements for Bruce Bairstow and Hap Murphey as he prepared for Saturday's game with Minnesota; both have been sidelined more than a week with injuries. Coach Bernie Bierman at Minnesota continued to shift first and second team players as he sought a starting lineup for the Wildcats. . . . Indiana worked on pass defense in preparation for Saturday's game with Iowa. . . . Notre Dame held a brief scrimmage as Coach Hugh DeVore continued to let his squad take things easy.

Purdue Coach Uses Psychology Rules To Build Gridders

By The Associated Press

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Oct. 17—If the rattle of opponents' teeth from the blocks and tackles of Purdue's Boilermakers is noticeably louder this year, it's because Coach Isbell was extra attentive in the psychology class in his undergraduate days.

The Boilermaker mentor, who takes his charges to Ohio State Saturday for a ranking Big Ten tussle, has a practice routine designed to bring his players out for the kickoff in a mood something akin to that of the Neanderthal man on a meat hunt.

"I don't want my players worn out with contact football on Saturday," he explains. "I want them eager to go hit somebody."

So he takes away the customary contact diet through the week. Purdue's drills during the regular season include no heavy blocking of tackling.

A "sham battle" is played however by full squads in regular equipment. The linemen block and the backs get in position for blocks, but each play ends with a toot from Isbell's whistle instead of a tackle that might send a player to the hospital.

Another innovation of the Isbell system is his remote control coaching system.

It's a new wrinkle to the common practice of placing a coaching assistant in the press box for a bird's eye view. At Purdue Isbell himself takes over the telephone booth atop the grandstands.

Isbell, contending "the bench is the worst seat in the stadium" from which to spot flaws in the play of both teams, talks to each player coming out of the game by phone.

Bowel Cleansing Power of Erb-Help Medicine

One man recently took ERB-HELP three days and said afterward that he never would have believed his body contained so much filthy substance. He says his stomach, intestine, bowels and whole system were so thoroughly cleansed that his constant headaches came to an end, several pimply skin eruptions on his face dried up overnight, and even the rheumatic pains in his knee disappeared. At present he is an altogether different man, feeling fine in every way.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Sold by all drug stores here in Marion.—Adv.

Double Main Event Thursday

Marion wrestling fans have a double main go attraction for their weekly menu of wrestling at the Marion Armory. The outstanding bout of the evening will be between Sgt. Billy Fox of Cleveland and Steve Nemoff, the Bulgarian. This match stands out as a "natural" because both men have won a number of matches in Marion and both have beaten Martino Angelo. Billy did it in two falls while it took three falls for the Bulgarian to do the same thing but, better still, Billy and Steve met in a main event in Lima last week and it was the hardest match the Marine has had since coming back to this country. Promoter Fishbaugh has rematched them for Marion fans. The other main go will bring in a newcomer from Boston, Jim Spencer, with the rough Canadian, Rod Fenton. A prelim at 8:30. Call Markert & Lewis Cigar Store early for seats to this splendid show.—Adv.

SNATCHES OF SPORTS

By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 — The current agreement between the major and minor baseball leagues likely will be extended for another year by means of a mail vote, thus removing most of the reasons for a good scrap when the minors meet at Columbus, O., in December. More material for football arguments: Charley Caldwell, Princeton coach, says Cornell's Alan Dekdebrun is the best passer in the east while Columbia Lou Little, who had Dekdebrun for a while, says he's good but that his own Gene Rosaides will be "very good" when he gets a little more experience. And Tuss McLaughry of Dartmouth lists Frank Dancewicz of Notre Dame as "the best quarterback in the country from the standpoint of running a team." Joe Louis says he'll remove his moussache as soon as he starts serious training. Apparently he doesn't want to beat Billy Conn by a whisker.

Rural Scouting Director Speaks at Meeting

E. H Bakken, national director of rural scouting, Boy Scouts of America, was the guest speaker at a dinner meeting Tuesday night at Camp Owens for scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, troop committeemen and commissioners. About 30 persons were present from Upper Sandusky, Mt. Gilead, and Marion.

In his talk, Mr Bakken stressed the importance of the committeemen working with the scoutmasters in setting up a community interest in scouting. He also stated that the local scoutmasters should do more for promoting scouting for the rural boys who are outside of a large city where no scouting is done.

Following his talk, Mr Bakken led the group in a roundtable discussion on troop week-end camping and troop programming.

GRAIN FUTURES SHOW IRREGULARITY TODAY

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 17—Consistent strength in wheat and sharp fluctuations in oats and rye dealings gave the grain futures market an irregular tone today.

The rye market, relatively weak most of the session, spurted upward near the close on moderate commission house demand and short covering. Offerings were light and the May delivery scored a gain of 2½ cents at one stage in the upturn.

May and July delivery wheat previously had received major support. Active buying by a leading commission house was regarded as a hedge removal operation probably induced by sales to the government. Commodity Credit Corp. purchases of wheat were being watched closely by traders.

Oats were under selling pressure most of the session but rallied near the close in response to support given rye. The early disposal of oats was believed to have been induced by reports that Minneapolis was offering this cereal to come to Chicago on a delivery basis. Cash interests here, however, considered the price out of line for actual business of that kind.

Corn, affected by favorable crop weather, remained relatively easy until it also reacted to the upturn in rye. Barley trade was light and prices easy.

STRIKE NEWS LIFTS MARKET

Stocks Show Recovery Trend with End of Coal Miners' Walkout.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 17—Stocks generally turned to the recovery side in today's market when it was learned John L. Lewis had called off the soft coal walkout which had been one of the principal threats to reconversion.

From the opening until midday dealings were relatively sluggish except for sizable blocks of low-quoted issues. Activity picked up a bit on the come-back and, while minus signs were well distributed near the fourth hour, advances were in the majority.

Among the first pivotals to revive were U. S. Steel and Bethlehem which touched peaks for 1945. Others in the "new high" class included Youngstown Sheet, Curtiss-Wright "A," Electric Power & Light, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber and Schenley. Propped also were Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Montgomery Ward, American Water Works, Standard Oil (NJ).

Rondo were steady and commodities uneven.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

"YOU never know around these diggings," Katharine said lightly.

Then she gave me an encouraging little pat on the shoulder. "I'll carry on," she said. "And the best of luck on your job. I don't envy you."

"I'm not looking forward to it with any enthusiasm," I said, and she clapped her hand over her mouth to repress a chuckle.

'Me, I calls that the champion understatement!'" she whispered, and with the memory of her understanding, laughing eyes cheering me, I left the apartment and made my reluctant way up to the palatial top floor "owner's suite" of the Lansfield, where I knew I would find Philip Veritzen, his regal wife, Olga, exiled queen of Tranvania, her daughter, Olina, and fugitive King Georges of Trees

I hesitated for a second before lifting my hand to the knocker, and before I could sound it, the door opened suddenly, revealing Olga in the doorway.

She put her finger to her lips, slipped the catch on the door so that she could open it again without a key, and stepped into the hall, closing it noiselessly behind her.

"I thought you would be coming," she said.

"Georges has no suspicion that he is to go so soon?" I asked.

"None whatever," she said, "and although my heart is filled with resentment against him, yet I cannot help feeling sorry for him. I have no time to tell you anything now, but I must see you at the first opportunity and compare notes. You must know one thing now, however. For the last hour, Georges has been devoting himself assiduously — and conspicuously—to Olina. I do not know how she is reacting, or whether to be glad or sorry. I wanted her to have a beautiful memory of Georges instead of a painful one, but—I do not know."

The words were a maternal cry of indecision, and suddenly Mary's admonition to Georges came insistently into my memory.

"If you don't make a big play for Olina," she had said, and then had told him in no uncertain terms how foolish he would be if he did not try to win back the beautiful princess, his former fiancee.

"There is nothing either of us can do about it now," I said. "Father has given me fifteen minutes from the time I reach here until I am back in our own apartment, so I must not delay any longer. And I must see Georges alone immediately."

She moved quickly back to the door.

"Come in at once," she said. "You will ask Georges to see him alone?"

"Yes," I answered as she opened the door and drew me inside.

Then she walked with me to the big sitting room where her husband was sitting in his special arm chair, reading, and where Georges and Olina were bending over a chess board in an alcove so separated from the rest of the room by draperies and adroitly arranged furniture that it was almost hidden. But I could see enough of the oblivious players to know that the chess game was but a pretext, and that in all probability neither had moved a man for a full quarter of an hour.

But Olga summoned them to attention cleverly, laughingly, but successfully.

"Look what I found in the hall, my Philip!" she said, raising her voice slightly. "Madge was just coming in, but unfortunately, she dd not come to see us. Her errand is with you, Georges."

"With me?" he asked, and there was a note in his voice that told me he was hoping I had another message for him from Mary.

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN BUNDESEN, M. D.

Convalescence

SOME fifty years ago the late eminent Doctor Silas Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia introduced a rest cure for the treatment of certain nervous disorders, and this treatment has influenced medical practice for this entire period of time. Nowadays, army physicians have realized the importance of rapidly restoring sick and disabled men to duty and, following Dr. Mitchell's idea, have developed programs which have revolutionized the use of physical and mental rest.

According to Doctor Frank H. Krusen of the Mayo Clinic, programs of physical and mental activity tend to keep patients in a much more cheerful mental state and, furthermore, tend to lessen the period of disease and the tendency to recurrence of the disease.

Convalescence Reduced

Some reports from Air Forces hospitals showed that the period of convalescence in certain acute catching diseases has been reduced from 30 to 40 per cent by these programs. One hospital reported a reduction from 18 to 11 days of hospitalization for patients with measles, and a drop from 30 to 23 days for patients with scarlet fever.

A study of more than 600 patients with a certain type of pneumonia showed that one group convalescing in the ordinary manner with continued rest averaged 45 days in the hospital, while for those given the mental and physical activity the period was reduced to 31 days. There was a recurrence of the condition in 30 per cent of the patients who were treated with rest, and in only 3 per cent of the patients who were kept active.

According to Doctor Krusen, there are but few patients who die of heatr failure alone, without complications The three great causes of death among patients who also have heart failure are the formation of a blood clot in the lungs, pneumonia, and a kidney disturbance called uremia. He thinks that these conditions are more likely to develop under a state of complete rest and might be prevented by mild muscular activity.

It would appear, then, that excessive rest may be almost as harmful as too much activity. It is the middle ground that must be considered. Each patient is carefully studied by the doctor and the amount of effort he is allowed to exert during his period of convalescence is determined by his condition.

Patients who have had an operation cannot be told to go home and return to work when they feel "strong enough" Rather, they must be observed throughout the period of recovery, and their activities controlled to bring about complete recovery as quickly as possible.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. W.: Could a cataract be caused by an injury or the physical condition of the individual? Does it come on suddenly or just gradually?

Answer: Injuries may produce cataracts. There are certain general disorders such as diabetes which may be accompanied by cataracts. As a general rule they develop gradually.

County School Supt. D. T. Mills Recalls Visits at Laval Home

Was Guest of One-Time French Leader's Daughter When They Were Associated as University Students 26 Years Ago.

Executive Monday of Pierre Laval brought back memories to [illegible] D. T. Mills Marion county superintendent of schools, of the times he was a guest in the Laval home in the months following World War I.

At that time, 26 years ago Mr. Mills was a young First Division replacement who had reached Europe in time for the battle of Belleau Woods and the final collapse of the German armies on the Western front.

Following the armistice American soldiers who had college training before entering the Army were given an opportunity to attend French colleges. Mills was one of a number selected to [illegible] at Grenoble, France, near the Swiss and Italian borders. He was there for six months during 1919.

Mutual Aid Plan

The American students were studying French exclusively and to make them more fluent in speaking the language the institution assigned one to a French boy or girl for after class meetings. In this way the Americans benefited from conversation with their new French friends and they, in turn, learned English.

Mills relates that the French boys and girls chosen by the university instructors were from the better homes of the town. He was assigned to Yvonne Lava, a girl of high social rank and the daughter of Pierre Laval.

Often at Laval Home

The Lavals lived in a fine home in Grenoble. Mills recalls that he often was a guest there for dinner or when friends were being entertained in the evening.

At that time Laval was the editor of a local newspaper. He also was prefect of Grenoble, the beginning of a long political career that was to make him premier three times, cabinet minister 11 times before his execution Monday as Premier No. 1 traitor.

Mills said his meetings with Laval were more or less casual. However, he recalls meeting him several times and on one occasion Laval allowed him through his newspaper office and print shop.

Life's Tragic End

Mills recalled Laval as a swarthy, strongly built man that "you would hate to run afoul of." Laval, then was in his middle thirties. Monday he was 62 when French bullets cut him down for his traffic with the Germans while head of the Vichy government.

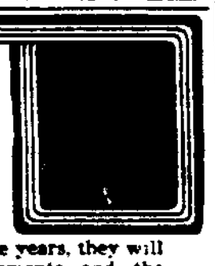
The Future Will Tell About Funeral Costs . . .



There is one unfailing guide to the question of how much should a family spend for a funeral. It is whether, in the future years, they will be satisfied with the arrangements and the amount invested.

At the Hughes Funeral Home we seldom advise our patrons on this matter. We feel that it is a question that should be decided by those who will pay the bill—and live with the memories in which they invested.

servicemen are adding their voice to that of other in- and organizations backing the Marion Jobs and Progress e office of the Marion Civic Planning Group on Center etters from numerous Marion men now in the armed ch lend their wholehearted support to the citywide program up for vote ember election.

ers have come from e land and sea forces many parts of the the servicemen are nd Marion a better n to live when they n by the fact that ve written letters not the plan but had been such a program would ed out for city betters received were in re- letters from the civic all Marion servicemen explaining the program. At intervals between now and election time The Star will publish as many of the letters as possible

The first one published today is from Morris Kline, SM1 c, USS Kiowa, FPO, New York City SM1 c Kline is the son of Mrs Morris W. Kline and the late Morris Kline of 291 Thew avenue.

Kline's letter addressed to the Marion Civic Planning Group follows:

"Very recently I received your letter outlining the proposed five point program for the betterment of Marion. Upon carefully weighing the merits of this program which you of the Marion Civic Planning Group have outlined, I find myself in complete agreement with this program, therefore I am prompting this reply hoping that anything I may say might help to further this great cause for which you at home are working so diligently, namely, to make Marion a better city in which to live.

"I was naturally curious as I began to read your letter but as I proceeded I grew very much interested and by the time I had completed reading and rereading it I knew that I must write to assure you that I, as a Marion serviceman, am sincerely in favor of your splendid program and there is no doubt in my mind that every civic minded person, serviceman and civilian alike, will support every project as outlined in your program to the best of his or her ability.

"For years Marion has been in dire need of an organization such as the one you have formed, laying the sectarian and political ambitions aside for the benefit of our community.

"Needless to say, our school facilities have been inadequate particularly due to the present day standard of living which has risen so high in the past several years. Of course the main concern is that Marion must soon have a new high school, gymnasium and auditorium, and I agree that there be no better time to act than now.

"The next note of interest to me was the airport. Only recently in an advertisement in a nationally known magazine I noticed Marion tentatively listed as a key city in transcontinental airways for the post-war world and I knew at once that someone at home must have been using some spare time, or perhaps full time, realizing the possibilities that our city might have in post-war years. It made me feel proud to see the name of our city listed among important American cities, and certainly every other sailor and soldier from Marion surely must have felt the same as I when he saw that very significant advertisement.

"The merits of the recreational project can be easily foretold and I can hardly add to what you have already said.

"Your proposal to use the present Harding High school as a municipal building is another project which has been talked of much but too little has been done, as well as the installation of a completely new sanitary and storm water sewer system. As you termed it—'this is a must.'

"If I may be permitted to speak in behalf of the majority of Marion servicemen, I will say only that I want to thank the citizens of Marion wholeheartedly for the fine work you have begun in laying the foundation for a better Marion, and my only wish would be that it were possible for me to be home to lend any necessary assistance.

"It is a great thing which you are endeavoring so hard to accomplish for us and generations to follow us so that we may live in a fine city in which we will be extremely proud to invite those from the outside to visit and to live.

"Again I thank you and wish you every success in the forthcoming election."

Respectfully yours,

big problem staring me in the face—at the start was my short term as commander of the Luzon was, of course, supply. Such as it was, I had no ver it—which irked me a bit. MacArthur had matter of Bataan supplies in the hands of Brig. is Beebe, over on Corregidor.

Rations Cut Another Third

n March 15 I went over to The Rock to see It was, as I knew it would be, a fruitless visit. back to Bataan with a heart made heavier by the I now had to tell my men that their rations—cut to the starvation quota of one half of a Filion per man—would now have to be cut by and in order for us to exist until April 10.

That was the day the last of the bony horses of the Sixth Cavalry were shot and cut up.

Between March 15 and 20 I spent much of my time men, then using up the majority of what was ur artillery shells and doing what they could to balance the impending Jap attack by means of run patrol action.

I spent some time with Parker to tell him what he tely knew: that when the blow fell it would fall on his II Corps. The shift of Jap troops to 's side of Bataan was gaining momentum every patrols reported.

Late on the night of March 20-21, three days after dio told us that MacArthur had reached Australia, my phone rang. It was Beebe calling, but the conion was very bad. I thought I heard him say something like, "I've got a nice piece of news for you, Gen-" but that was too improbable under the circumces.

"I can't hear you," I shouted into the phone.

I heard his voice dimly again, so I yelled across the ring to Johnny Pugh to pick up his extension phone try to hear what Beebe was saying.

I heard Pugh pick up his phone and say, "Hello, at is it, General Beebe?"

Gets News of Promotion

And then, as if from a thousand miles away, I heard say, "Tell General Wainwright that he has been moted to lieutenant general and . . . ."

"What's that, Beebe?" I cut in.

"A wire has just come in from the War Depart-nt promoting you . . . ."

es, yes . . . go ahead."

. . promoting you to lieutenant eral. The troops in the Philips are to be called hereafter the ted States Forces in the Philips, and you're designated as mander in chief. Can you come the first thing in the morn-? I'll send a crash boat for

'll be on the dock at Mariveles ight o'clock," I told him.

did not sleep much that night.

Not Much Ceremony

he next morning, March 21, I up early, took out a clean removed two stars off an old and pinned one on each lder. A soldier could wish for little more ceremony when he another star, I guess. Yet it a thrill, I admit.

called Pugh, Dooley and Sgt. roll and went over to Corregi-

Beebe met me at the dock we went directly to Macur's old office, a cubbyhole in Malinta tunnel. Beebe pro-ed the war department message in reading it I noticed that the er did not say "armed forces" said "you are assigned to com-nd all United States forces in Philippines," which included the tiny Navy and its men.

I therewith issued my first order, telling of my new assignment——an announcement which confused MacArthur when he received it by radio, and one which later was used against me by General Homma, when I tried to duck his demand that I surrender all Philippine forces.

MacArthur promptly messaged me, asking why I had assumed command of all U. S. forces in the islands. He had not been informed of this change, so I sent him the text of the War Department order.

In MacArthur Party

I went to work with what remained of the old and first-class staff of Corregidor officers. MacArthur had taken a nucleus of 15 top men with him, to begin his long march back. The MacArthur party was made up, in addition to Mrs. MacArthur, their small son and his amah, of:

Maj. Gen. Sutherland; Brig. Gen. Richard J. Marshall, Deputy Chief of Staff; Col. Charles P. Stivers, Asst. Chief of Staff, G-1; Col. Charles A. Willoughby, Asst. Chief of Staff, G-2; Capt. Joesph McMicking, Air Corps, Asst. G-2; Brog. Gen. Spencer B. Akin, Signal Officer; Lt. Col. Joe R. Sherr, Asst. Signal Officer; Brig. Gen. William F. Marquat, Antiaircraft Officer; Brig. Gen. Harold H. George, Air Officer; Brig. Gen. Hugh J. Casey, Engineer; Lt. Col. Sidney L. Huff, Aide-de-Camp; Lt. Col. Francis H. Wilson, Aide-de-Camp; Lt. Col. Legrand A. Diller, Aide-de-Camp; Maj. Charles H. Morhouse, Medical Corps, and Master Sgt. Paul P. Rogers, secretary.

First Surrender Demand

But I had good men left, men who were of the same disposition as I was two days earlier when I received the first Jap demand that we surrender.

The demand was dropped from planes over Bataan. It was dropped in thousands of empty beer cans, to each of which was attached red and white ribbons to make spotting easier. In the cans were the demands, addressed to me and saying, in part, "If you do not reply to this by special messenger within three days we will feel free ot act in any way at all." It was signed "The Commanders in Chief, Imperial Japanese Army and Navy Forces in the Philippines."

I informed MacArthur and the War Department, but made no reply to the Japs. No reply was necessary.

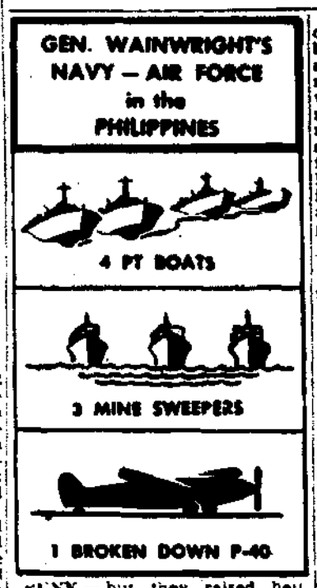
(TOMORROW: Wainwright fights for food for his starving men on Bataan, receives an audacious food-capturing plan from General MacArthur, and hears from Bataan that Maj. Gen. Edward P. King fears he will be forced to surrender.)

100 NURSES FOR 70,000 MEN. Nurses Phyllis Arnold (left), of Minneapolis, and Denny Williams of Culpepper, Va., were among those who worked as hard as General Wainwright's men in the epic defense of Bataan. Here they are preparing bandages in an operating ante-room.



RUNY — but they raised hell with the Japs: The accompanying chart shows the insignificance of General Wainwright's "Navy" and "Air Force" after he was left in charge of defending Bataan and Corregidor. The respective strengths of the Americans and Japanese are discussed in today's chapter of "This Is My Story."

Public Opinion Not Involved

BEFORE the debate streamlining national defense develops into a tangle of technicalities and jealousies, it should be made perfectly clear to the professional service people involved that the taxpayers' position is neutral. They have no battle of public opinion to worry about. Public opinion cannot settle so technical an issue.

During and after every war the citizens who pay the cost as well as those who do the fighting reach the conclusion that much could be done to eliminate waste and friction as between the land and sea forces of the nation. In short, the thing that starts the discussion every time is the demonstration of weakness. The United States, incidentally, is not unique in this respect.

This time, of course, a tragic note was added by the circumstantial evidence at the outset of the war that a creaking and disjointed arrangement of defense at Pearl Harbor left that vital bastion wide open to Japan's attack. There is a wrong to be righted, as well as an inefficiency to be overcome. The war department and the navy department were placed on the defensive as a prelude to their later triumph.

The judgment of civilians on the proper form of military organization is unqualified. Civilians do not care what is done about reorganization of national defense as long as they have assurance that generals and admirals are not competing with each other at the people's expense.

Discipline Outside the Law

THE congressional search for a method of enforcing industrial discipline in behalf of the common welfare is limited in its possibilities.

There will be under any code of public regulation a tremendous slack which can be taken up only by self-discipline outside the law.

If it were possible to put into effect tomorrow a composite of all the best features proposed for regulating industrial relations, there still would be the utmost necessity for self-regulation on the part of both employers and employes.

The gravity of this aspect of the problem is evident in the frequency of work stoppages caused not by any difference between employers and the authorized representatives of unions, but by differences within the unions. In some cases their leadership is being challenged openly by dissident elements; it is evident, too, that in some cases union leadership, hard-pressed to retain its position, is being forced by restless elements to take positions that do not represent its best judgment.

The theory of collective bargaining rests on contractual responsibility. Employers held to the letter of their written agreements have every right to demand that unions will bind themselves, yet in many situations the ability of unions to discipline their membership is problematic. A work stoppage is no less a problem when produced by a "wildcat strike" than it is when it results from an authorized strike vote.

The hard, unpleasant fact is that the government has no means of enforcing within unions discipline they cannot enforce upon themselves. It can seize an employer's property, but it cannot seize a labor union.

Defense Fallacy

THE wishful belief that a defense against atomic bombs already has been discovered can be traced to the fallacy that every new weapon's potency is quickly offset by a new defense. Thus, poison gas is offset by the gas mask. The bombing plane is offset by antiaircraft weapons and radar. The submarine is offset by the destroyer, the land mine by the mine detector and so on.

The record of new weapons and defense against them makes it plain, however, that the defense never catches up with the offense. The atomic bomb, if there are to be more wars, will kill and maim, regardless of defense, just as ordinary bombs killed and maimed in this war despite all the defense that could be rigged against them. Submarines, after two wars and a generation of research to find a defense, still rate as one of the major destroyers of all times. Gas attacks cannot be turned back with gas masks. Great Britain claimed a defense against buzz-bombs and even against rockets, but the statistics on death and maiming show clearly that the British were whistling in the dark.

That is what Americans are doing about atomic bombs—whistling in the dark. Common sense tells us that ultimately everybody will know how to manufacture them and that the United States should act accordingly. But are reluctant to act on common sense, so we turn to imagination instead—that someone, perhaps Bing Crosby—already knows how to put a hex on the newest, biggest and baddest wolf that ever threatened to blow down civilization's house and kill everybody in it. It is a charming idea, but utterly foolish.

New York's resigned police heads signs with a radio gangbuster program, where he will be expected to make an important arrest between commercials.

So far, radio has not been called on to counterfeit the atomic-bomb blast. One assumes, however, the sound effects man will have to stand closer to the mike to snap his gun.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

Government Lacks Strike Policy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—The administration is trying hop-skip and jump solutions of the mass strike action allowing 15 per cent wage increases here and there, moving the Navy into plants, allowing states to press for settlements by threats and seizures, providing lapses as in motors and steel — and talking about getting a new labor board.

Frankly no one here thinks this will do the job. You cannot patch up a flood. Unless the government takes hold of the fundamentals and solves them, there will be strikes from now on.

The fundamentals behind the situation have been obscured from the public eye by the chaos of propaganda. The union campaign has passed from the economic into the political stage.

Their war time campaigns were plotted on economic grounds. They massed figures to claim prices had advanced more than wages and therefore demanded wage increases to the same extent prices had advanced.

Switch Strategy

They have switched their strategy away from that ground entirely. Now they want a 30 per cent wage increase, not claiming prices have advanced, but on the new ground that they want to maintain national purchasing power.

The same symptoms are evident in the position of John Lewis in coal. First he got his wage increases on price grounds, then developed something new called portal-to-portal to claim additional increases which could not be justified on price grounds, and now is fomenting for foremen in whom he was never before interested.

Thus labor has dropped the appeal to the public for justice, the popular appeal which made the unions what they are today. It no longer takes the public into its confidence by announcing what it wants in many instances. In other cases, it assumes an unequivocal public-be-damned policy (New York elevator strike).

A patchwork handling of this condition can only lead to greater success for the unions along their present line. There must always necessarily be more and more strikes, more and more wage increases for any reasons, higher and higher prices. The situation thus will never get settled. On this current line it can never be stabilized.

Mr. Truman no doubt thinks he is playing good politics, as Mr. Roosevelt did with the same methods, but I do not think so. Mr. Roosevelt could get away with it economically because the situation was only starting then.

New At Zenith

Now it has reached a zenith which means the unions have more control over economic policy of the nation than the government. They can force the country into inflation against Mr. Truman's own policy. To deliver his controls to the pressures of union political action can have but one result — defeat of his economic policies and therefore of himself.

If the unions continue without responsibility to the nation but only to their own causes, they must inevitably force inflation to its upper limits and beyond into economic collapse and finally into Socialism, of either the Russian, German or possibly (but not probably) of the proposed American type.

Inflation means bankruptcy and the world knows no answer to that except arbitrary Socialism—a dictatorship which requires men to do the will of a single-headed state.

Such events would hardly bring Mr. Truman any political success, or the unions in the long run, as the Army would no doubt operate our dictatorship.

Yet they are visible steps which could be taken to deal with the fundamentals. Economic directorship must be restored to government subject to appeals but uncontrollable by pressures.

An economic policy for the good of the people as a whole must be established beyond reach of the unions. A basis of justice for all must be established in place of the Roosevelt policy of justice-for-the-unions-more-than-anyone-else.

No National Interest

The unions cannot assume a national responsibility. Their very position as a minority class group prevents them from genuinely assuming a character based on national interest. But they must be made responsible to the public, the government and their own membership by laws placing them on a just footing with other class groups such as farmers and non-union workers, but requiring them to incorporate or otherwise making them responsible for their actions before the law and the public.

To force them to incorporate would make them pay taxes to support the country as others do, cause them to assume a genuine financial responsibility so their members can see where their hard-earned money goes. They could sue and be sued.

Then the public through the government would have some hold on them. Their strikes would have to be justified, and their appeals made to justice, rather than to runaway pressure. They could deal with business on an equal plane.

This is the only way I can find in logic or common sense to prevent inevitable inflation, collapse and socialism.

Author of the Week

By W. G. Rogers

Associated Press Book Reviewer.

GEORGE SOULE

GEORGE SOULE, author of "America's Stake in Britain's Future," is a planner. Member of the National Planning Association and author of "A Planned Society," among other books, he went to England last December planning to write this book. As an unofficial visitor he was able to persuade officials to talk freely. Since 1924 he has been editor of the New Republic.

Britain's export trade absolutely essential to her in the post-war world parallels not her own internal economic wellbeing but rather America's, says Soule. If consequently this country falls again into a depression prevailing British opinion would almost certainly hold that the rest of the world must be organized to resist American economic infection, just as during the war the rest of the world was organized to resist German military domination."

This is a harsh comparison, but no harsher than the British would believe we merited, this writer declares after a visit to England.

At first glance, his book looks more like the picture of Britain's stake in America than the other way around. The war has left us a giant in industry and economics, rich in gold, manpower, ships, planes. Are we going to use them solely in our own immediate interest, the anxious British want to know, or help out the rest of the world as we did in the war?

Britain believes that her future depends upon the maintenance of full employment in America. She looks upon us as a country which sells more than it buys, we have not managed to be prosperous at home without, as Soule phrases it, giving away surplus wealth abroad in the form of loans or subsidized exports. In the 1930s Britain said, we exported unemployment, and this view is shared by Soule and other Americans.

Committed definitely to full employment at home, Britain fears that, instead of adopting something like the Wallace program of planning for 60,000,000 jobs we may have to experience another depression before we seriously undertake the job of taming our economy."

In other words shall we change from giant to monster? If we change and here it becomes really a question of our stake in Britain's future she can leave us to stew in our own juices and within her own empire form a trading bloc that will enable her at least to survive, if not to prosper greatly. Out of that rivalry World War III could grow.

This is a most carefully reasoned presentation. It will be wildly praised, heatedly condemned. It deserves a reading.

Wealth on America's "Shelf"

A NEW kind of submarine action is found along both coasts of the United States, National Geographical Society reports. Oil is being taken from offshore deposits. Fisheries are also involved.

The section of the seabed looked to as a source of new wealth is the underwater continuation of the mainland known as the continental shelf. Almost 760,000 square miles of this land projection has been declared by presidential proclamation last Sept. 28 the exclusive territory of the United States. Seaward limits of the area are fixed by a depth of 600 feet, which depth may be reached a few miles from shore, or much farther out.

Average offshore distances to which the immersed territory extends from the several coasts are: Atlantic 73 miles, Pacific 18 miles, Gulf of Mexico, 60 miles; Bering Sea, 57 miles, and Arctic Ocean, 105 miles. Assertion of national sovereignty over submerged territory contiguous to the American coasts is concerned with the possibility of foreign exploitation.

Operations for the recovery of minerals beneath the sea have been carried on for many years, but distances from the shore have been within or have not greatly exceeded the three-mile limit. One California oil company has tapped ocean wells which, at low tide, are about a third of a mile from the shore. The workings of a Nova Scotia coal mine reach more than three miles under the sea. Newfoundland's Bell Island "submarine" from mine has been pushed out three miles "beneath the sea floor."

To get the most out of your sweet peppers, pick them red instead of green as they increase in carotene and ascorbic acid as they turn red.

More Than Foolishness

By Raymond Moley

NO one except President Truman is in a position to give the public the facts about the basic issue in current strikes. That issue runs through all labor arguments, not only in labor leaders' statements, but in the labor and pro-labor press. It is whether the companies which are victims of strikes are "gorged" with profits, as one apologist put it.

Here is an issue of cold fact. The President has at his command all the facts necessary to a judgment on this point—treasury facts, WPB facts, War and Navy department facts. Under the war powers of the President, congress authorized every means necessary not only to measure war profits, but to "take the profit out of war."

The Truman committee was created during the war to prevent, among other things, the very profiteering which is now charged. The full employment bill, which President Truman favors, assumes that the President is already the fountainhead of economic data. No one else has such statistical services. No one else can create that public opinion which is the only thing that all sides in these controversies will respect.

Public Ignored

Yet that latent force of public opinion is unused. The public is annoyed but, in the main, confused.

We now learn that a reorganization of the labor department is no cure-all. The assumption that the trouble was in the scattering of labor agencies was candidate Dewey's great weakness in his 1944 labor program. It doesn't matter where labor agencies may be located in the government, if those agencies are wrongly conceived and unfairly administered. The New Deal in the labor department has done nothing but bring forth Secretary Schwellenbach as candidate for "the man of the hour," only to prove that he is not "the man of the hour."

There are hard, solid verities in this situation which President Truman must meet head-on. He is certainly not meeting them by calling on all involved to 'cut out all the foolishness." This business is more than foolishness. It involves questions of fact and integrity.

He should tell us whether wage increases are possible without higher prices. He should make clear to labor that unless contracts are observed, the whole structure of public integrity must fall. He must clearly bring to the attention of responsible labor leaders that they must either control the pernicious small-fry who have started so many strikes, or lose the support of government. And he must recognize that "labor" is not the only party with meritorious claims in industry.

Situation Precarious

The political situation of the President is, of course, precarious. He is being told by politicians from industrial states that he cannot afford to lose the minorities, including political labor, which always carried those states for Mr. Roosevelt. This is especially true in the case of New York. His leanings toward the conservative south are suspected in radical circles.

But he is President of the United States, as well as the custodian of the Democratic party, and the powers needed to meet this crisis are more than those of a party leader.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Atom Bomb Control by a Commission

THERE is a Washington proposal that the bomb be controlled by a commission. Now we realize that the human race is in greater danger than ever.

If there is one thing that will never help the atomic bomb crisis it is a bunch of [illegible] commissioners, even if they have good voices and screen well.

The plan calls for an atom bomb administrator and a deputy administrator, believe not, at good salaries. Can you imagine a couple of lame ducks up there saving us from the greatest danger to civilization in history?

We await the matchless spectacle of a group Washington politicians in a huddle to pick atom bomb controllers who will be satisfactory to the factions.

All we hope is that they don't decide to add to the duties of Harold Ickes.

Look for the following in Washington dispatches:

T. Jarvis Quinch was chosen today in the battle over the appointment of an atomic administrator. Mr. Quinch is regarded as eminently fitted for the post. There is but one flaw in his record. He was once a state fire commissioner and let a cannon-cracker blow up in his own face.

Dudley C. Bumpley, a dark horse, won the post of First Deputy Atomic Bomb Commissioner by two votes. Mr. Bumpley has been a commissioner of one thing or another all his life—and office hunter. He is a good mixer and should get along with an atomic bomb if anybody can. He has a reputation for fairness, and promises the Republicans the same chance against split atoms as the Democrats will get. He dictated this illuminating statement to the press:

"I am an arden believer in the control of bombs. I know of nothing in need of more constant supervision and I will be at my desk handling this one from 10 to 4 every day except Saturdays and Sundays. Be calm and trust me."

Elliott P. Zonk leads the field in the race for Third Deputy Commissioner in Charge of Atomic Bombs. He was former Administrator of Seismographic Disturbances and Unanticipated Floods.

Mr. Zonk doesn't look psysically the type to deal with an atomic bomb but will grow a black mustache and wear riding boots with spurs during office hours.

"What is your personal opinion on the atomic bomb?" he was asked.

"I am against it," he replied. "Depend on me to give it a battle."

"Do you think we should share the secret?"

"For the present I will be satisfied if somebody who understands it shares it with me," he replied.

"Do you think Russia should get it from us?"

"Only under lend lease," he snapped.

But wait. Good gosh, here come the leaves!

The Other Driver

By Truman Twill

Consider the other driver. He is obviously a lunkhead who should not be allowed on the highway.

He is always full of sly tricks and deadly maneuvers, such as turning around suddenly in the middle of the block and darting out of side streets. Furthermore, he probably is not insured.

Nine times out of 10 he will stop suddenly for no reason at all, except to smash up the innocent victim driving behind him, who is you. This is because the other driver is mentally unbalanced. He is, no doubt drunk to boot.

His dumbest antic is to turn right when he has made all the customary preparation for turning left, such as getting into the middle of the street. This is so he can make a wreck of your car and mangle its occupants. The other driver is an escaped lunatic.

He dawdles at intersections because he does not have his mind on his business and is always gawking at something besides the traffic. A stop sign to him is just a challenge to step on the gas and see how many innocent bystanders he can send to the hospital.

He blows his horn behind you when you are waiting for old ladies to get across the street, but if you blow your horn behind him because he has gone to sleep at the switch he turns around in his seat and makes an obscene remark.

On Sundays he mopes along at 25 miles an hour when everybody else wants to drive better at 45, but on Saturday night, if it is raining, he insists on cutting in and out of traffic at a pace that will land someone in the hospital in critical condition in the very near future.

His fenders have jagged edges that would figure some poor pedestrian who never will know what hit him. He knows no more about parking than a pig knows about Christmas. He is careless about backing out of driveways and crowds oncoming traffic into the ditch because he cannot see. He is deaf and has not had his brakes checked since before the war. Also his windshield is cracked.

One wonders why the other driver does not stay at home where he belongs, because he is unfit to drive anything deadlier than a soap box car. Since this is an opinion that he shares about you—there is nothing to do but show your contempt by never giving him the benefit of a doubt.

Raspberry Bushes Bear Second Crop

The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la, have nothing on the raspberries that bear in the fall at the home of Mr and Mrs. Carl McWherter one and one-half miles west of the city A few days ago Mr. McWherter picked a handful of ripe black raspberries in the patch and by way of proving to any doubting Thomases, left a sizeable few on the bush. The bushes did a satisfactory job of bearing in the summer and the second crop was an agreeable surprise to the family.

Fred Allen Rates Fifth After Return to Air

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 — Fred Allen, back on the air via NBC only a short time after a year's absence, gained a fairly high rating in the first Hooper program report to come out since his return. He landed in a tie for fifth place with Jack Benny for the period ending October 15. This likewise was Benny's first check-up of the year.

Leading the list were Fibber McGee and Molly, also just starting a new season, followed by Bob Hope second, Charlie McCarthy third and Radio Theater fourth. Completing the first ten after Allen and Benny were Screen Guild and Walter Winchell tied, District Attorney and Abbott and Costello, in that order.

Tiny Primer Touched Off Big Fire Bombs

MIGHTY MITE—A deadly M26 bomb primer looks unimportant beside an aspirin and pencil. . .

By The Associated Press

EAST ALTON, Ill. — A tiny round primer only about half the weight of an aspirin tablet set off each of the M74 fire bombs that bathed Japan in flames.

One pound of the detonator-type primers, one of the smallest and most sensitive pieces of war equipment, was enough for 2,500 bombs, its manufacturers now can disclose.

The little tool of destruction is 3/32nd of an inch high, 3/16th of an inch in diameter and weighs 2 8/10th grains. It was tailored to order for the bombing of Japan and named the M26.

Thanks to the design of the M26 and its fuse, the Army's 101-pound "goop" fire bombs, in which the primer was placed, would detonate regardless of the way it landed.

Three parts make up "the 26," a small metal cup, a delicate priming mixture and a disk of brass foil. A firing pin stabs the .0008-inch foil, according to Olin Industries' Western Cartridge Co. here. This blasts out the priming mixture which, in turn, touches off the deadly synthetic lava in the 19-inch long bomb.

Despite the deadliness of its product, Western, one of the major makers of the new primer, operated its detonator department 412 days—1,251,698 man hours—without an accident.

Workers stood behind steel safety barricades while loading the primer by remote control.

The "goop" the portable lava package peltered down on Osaka, spread 75 feet of hard-to-extinguish liquid fire. The M26 primer is its barin.

Adults Guilty, Too

Wonder how local parents can explain this one to the junior members. After glancing at a few newly poured cement walks or sections, all the footprints left for posterity belong to adults and not to the smaller folk.

Doesn't Feel Natural

While waiting in a clothing store the other day we glanced around and saw a G.I. trying on civilian suit coats. His first trial was with a gray blue coat that was quite a change from the Army brown. He seemed sort of pleased with the contrast but kept hunching his shoulders a little until he was reminded by the clerk that they wouldn't feel the same as a uniform.

Almost Overlooked

Only after all reservations were made recently for a party did it dawn on the one in charge that the guest of honor hadn't been counted with the others. The error was hastily corrected.

Cover the Field

It's amazing what a variety of subjects the younger generation can cover during the times necessary to down a milk shake. Sitting next to us the other noon, two teen-agers discussed the slowness of one fellow student, their mutual dislike of music, cost of the liquid refreshment they were enjoying, the weather being just right for football and even the nickle owed by one to the other. That subject was skirted very successfully by the way. The inquirer was told to collect it from "so-and-so," to which the first boy asked "Why, does he owe you one?" The answer was yes, so that problem was successfully handled.

Jumpy Season

Halloween is certainly here! Many Marionites have discovered that during the past few days when they jumped about 16 inches straight up after one of those tic-tacks chattered on the window. Thank goodness for drawn blinds, at least that cheats the youngsters out of watching the jump.

Where the Fun Comes

Our corner seems to be a special congregating place for such Halloweeners. First you hear the pounding feet, then the giggles and panting from those who ran last. Sooner or later one asks the other, "Did they jump? Could you see anything?"

Where Fun Stops

Speaking of such pranks. According to comments overheard in various places about town, very few object to the fun making in which youngsters indulge until it comes to actual damage, such as broken windows, paint smeared over an automobile or other things similar, then all agree that is carrying things just a little over the prankish stage.

Spirit of the Season

The novel window decorations in a small shop off the main streets have attracted so much attention those passing watch especially for a new arrangement. The one now on display is one of prancing skeletons, big round pumpkins, eerie looking spider webs and spitting black cats, all arranged in weird but very lifelike positions.

Local Woman Sees Famed Painting Presented To Ohio

Miss Mabel Wheatley of 227 West Church street, art chairman of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, represented the state organization when Howard Chandler Christy's painting, "The Signing of the Treaty of Greene Ville," was presented to the state of Ohio, Monday afternoon in the statehouse rotunda. The painting, the second largest canvas in the United States, was accepted by Gov. Lausche, from the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Society in the presence of the world-famous, Ohio-born artist and a crowd of several hundred persons.

In accepting the 20-foot wide painting as a part of the state's celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the treaty with the Indians at Fort Greene Ville, Gov. Lausche lauded it not only for the "magnificence of its artistic perfection," but for its "portrayal of an historical event of such great significance." The presentation was made by Arthur C. Johnson, president of the Ohio Archaeological and Historical society. The painting will hang opposite Powell's "Victory" in the rotunda when the former is raised to its permanent setting within the next three weeks. The artist and Mrs. Christy, who also attended the ceremonies, were presented by Mr. Johnson with life membership in the Society.

The painting ranks second in size in painting in America to Christy's 'Signing of the Constitution' which hangs in the rotunda of the capitol in Washington. It is the largest canvas in Ohio.

Introduced to the crowd Artist Christy said: "Let this painting by my speech."

Among those present on the speakers' stand and introduced were Mrs Christy, Henry C. Shetrone, director of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical museum, Congressman John M Vorys of Columbus, Miss Wheatley, Azeglio Pancani of New York who carved the frame for the painting, Paul S. Clapp of Columbus, one of the originators of the idea for the painting, State Senator Theodore Gray of Piqua and State Representative Guy Hawley of Greenville, who sponsored the $20,000 appropriation by the state for the painting, and Mayor Ernest R.
